

A Family Business With The Same Mission Through 3 Generations

Arai is not your typical helmet company; in fact it wouldn't be typical even if it wasn't a helmet company. First, in an industry of large, publicly-held competitors, Arai is a comparatively small, family operation, owned by the Arai family through three generations. Hirotaké Arai, a talented rider in his own right and, ironically, a custom hat maker by trade, founded it in 1937 in Ohmiya, Japan. Today, the second and third generations are represented by Hirotaké's son, Michio "Mitch" Arai, the current president, and his son, Akihito, known as "Aki."

Ask Mitch Arai what he thinks makes his company unique, and he takes its multi-generation history to a different level: "We have had the same goal, the same mission, throughout these three generations. Nobody else can have that because public companies change owners and goals." Yet it's not this single mission per-se that makes him proud, it's what the mission is: "Our focus has always been the rider. Other companies might say that, but our history shows that all Arai innovations have been created to give the rider better protection, comfort and fit ... These innovations do not all make news and they are not all fashionable, but this is not our goal. The goal is doing our very best for the rider ... Arai is a conservative company. We say the job of a motorcycle helmet has not changed – protection against impact. You can add things to it as long as you never forget those basics. ... Every Arai worker knows that a rider is depending on them to do their best. This understanding, and the decades it has existed, has resulted in a very distinctive Arai culture here, built around the goal. We do not ask workers to be loyal to Arai, we ask them to be loyal to our goal: a better helmet for riders. Please remember, we came from a rider, and that rider was my father. It is our family name on the helmet. How could we do less than our best?"

All Arai helmets are built to one standard, not to price points, no low-end to high-end. To those who say Aria's are expensive, the response is that it takes so much time and effort to build each one that "the cost to build determines the cost to sell." The helmets are handmade. Standards and tolerances are so strict that every single Arai shell must pass at least three inspections, including shell thickness, before it's even assembled. "A rider must be able to trust what is under Arai paint."

There are only 15 men in the entire company qualified to hand-make an Arai helmet shell. That is 15 for the worldwide market. Clearly, this is not a company out to flood the market with "product." And these 15 shell experts do not just build motorcycle helmet shells. They are also responsible for all of Arai's auto-racing shells. It is one thing, they say, to build a good motorcycle helmet. But to possess a capability so advanced that you can not only compete in Formula-1, but dominate the grid – and have four of the last six world champions, including the current one – says more than words can about the company's obsession with quality above all. Even more telling, every F-1 driver wears an Arai for free – no sponsorship money.

New Arai helmet designs are sculpted by hand, not computers. "Computers are very good," says Mr. Arai. "But computers solve mathematical problems. People solve human problems. Our helmets are designed for humans." Arai stays with its side-pod shield system because they feel it intrudes less into the shell shape than the newer podless systems, letting the shell "do its job better in the rapid dispersal and dissipation of impact energy via a smoother shell surface."

"We really hope people can understand it's not just about more sales around here. Mr. Arai doesn't care about fashion; if the feeling is that something isn't true to our core culture's emphasis on the best rider protection, comfort, and fit we can build, they just won't do it. Podless systems are much easier and cheaper to build than ours is. We know our faceshield system isn't intuitive. But intuitive's not the point. Pod vs. podless isn't the point. Rider protection is. Has been since the beginning."

HELMET FITMENT SPECIFICATIONS

HOW TO PROPERLY FIT AN ARAI HELMET

These pages are designed only as a condensed version of your Arai® Fit Video.
They should be used as a reference only after viewing the video.

THE CUSTOMER:

Unless this is your customer's very first motorcycle helmet, be prepared for them to "help" you fit them, like telling you they already know their size, etc. Politely tell them that, to you, it's not a "helmet", it's an "Energy Management System", a device whose main job is to manage the energy of an impact. In order to do its job effectively it must fit a certain way, and your job is to help determine that proper fit. This statement should change their minds and persuade them to let you do your job.

VISUAL EXAMINATION:

Begin with a visual examination of the customer's head shape.

Head shape is as important to a proper fit as head size. Is the head round or long? Does the eyebrow area protrude from the forehead, or is it level with the forehead?

Does the forehead protrude, is it flat, or does it slope back from the brow?

Is the back of the head "pointed" or flat? Does the customer have a lot of hair, or little or none? Are the cheeks full, or even with the facial structure, or sunken? (As the Arai® video explains, some customers – especially those who wear helmets that are too large – have full faces, and can make the mistake of wearing helmets that fit their face instead of their head.)

THE MEASUREMENT:

Measuring the customer's head is the starting point for the sizing procedure.

Due to varying shapes, heads that are apparently the same size when measured by a tape may not necessarily fit the same size helmet.

You are trying to find the longest distance around the customer's head, at eyebrow level, above the ears. It may require several different attempts to establish the longest possible measurement, but it is absolutely essential to getting the right fit.

NOTE: Be sure to use an accurate measuring device that shows inches (in) and centimeters (cm). They are obtainable at any fabric store or order 81-0128 for Arai's measuring tape.

TRYING ON THE HELMET:

- 1 First, have the customer grab the helmet by the chin straps, with the front of the helmet facing him and the top of the helmet facing down.
- 2 He should place the thumbs on the inside surface of the straps and balance the helmet with his index fingers.
- 3 Then, spreading the helmet apart by the straps, have him slip the helmet down over the head. This may take a bit of practice and extra instruction, so pay particular attention to this step.

If you see that the helmet slides down on his head with little or no resistance, you have your first indication that it may be too large. Obviously, if it will not slide down over the head at all it is too small. Many people unfamiliar with proper helmet fit are reluctant to pull down if they meet resistance as the helmet goes on. Only if the helmet is impossible to put on should you move up to the next size larger, since helmets that go on snug generally fit very well once they are all the way on. Remember, most people left to their own devices will select a helmet that is too large for them. The eyes should be approximately in the center of the eye port with the top edge of the liner padding just above the eyebrows.

CHECKING HORIZONTAL AND VERTICAL MOVEMENT:

While the customer is wearing the helmet, look carefully at the way it fits. Check to see if the cheek pads are in contact with the cheeks. Is there excess pressure on the cheeks? In most Arai® models the cheek pads/earcups can be removed to verify the fit around the crown of the head if necessary, and replaced with thicker or thinner units to fit the face better. If there is a problem in the fit around the facial areas, you should consider completely removing the cheek pads, and then fit alternate cheek pad thickness until the proper comfort level is achieved. You may choose, in the case of a customer with a particularly broad facial structure, to remove the cheek pad set completely to get their head into the interior of the helmet to prove that the circumference is correct. Then, address facial fit by adjusting the thickness of the cheek pads. (Obviously, as a retailer, having a selection of cheek pads in thicknesses to fit the varying models is going to be essential to this process.)

Look for gaps between the temples and the crown padding. Check the back of the helmet where the neck roll makes contact with the neck. Does it touch at all? Or is it pushing the helmet away at the rear, causing it to roll down over the eyes in front? After you have made your visual check, grab the helmet in your hands, one hand on either side, and try to rotate the helmet from side to side. Note any movement of the skin while doing this, as well as the amount of resistance to movement while the customer holds his head steady. The helmet padding should not slide easily over the skin, but should pull the skin in the direction of rotation. Next, check movement up and down, again noting skin movement and resistance. If there was little or no skin movement in either the vertical or horizontal tests, and/or the helmet moved very easily, the helmet is too large. A properly fitted helmet will cause the skin to move as the helmet moves – and the wearer will feel as if evenly-distributed pressure is being exerted around the head.

NOTE: Helmets are a little like boots, in that they will break-in a bit. For this reason, the best attitude to have when fitting is that the helmet should be as snug as possible, without being painful.

RETENTION CHECK:

WARNING: This test may be a little uncomfortable for the customer, but it is very important! Have the customer tightly fasten the chin strap so you can check it. After the strap has been tightly fastened, and while holding his head steady, have him reach over the top of the helmet and grab the back of the helmet's bottom edge with one or both hands. Then ask him to try to roll the helmet forward off his head. If it comes off, or comes close to coming off, it is too large or it is not the proper fit.

PRESSURE POINT CHECK:

Have him unfasten the chin strap and remove the helmet. Immediately after the helmet has been removed, observe coloration of the skin at the forehead and cheeks. A reddening of the skin in a small area may indicate a pressure point. Pressure points sometimes are not noticed by the wearer for several minutes, or even hours later. They sometimes cause headaches, and are at the least, uncomfortable. If you notice a pressure point, or the customer experienced discomfort there while wearing the helmet, it's too small or is the wrong interior shape. Before going to a larger size, have the customer try one or more of the other Arai® interior shapes in the same size to see if the pressure points are relieved.

THE ROLE OF HEAD SHAPE IN FITTING AN ARAI® HELMET

As said above, the shape of the head – the relationship between length and width – are as important as head size in properly fitting a helmet. Arai® now offers three interior fit shapes for full-face helmets, based on the following:

"Long Oval", The traditional Arai® fit — in which the head length is distinctly narrow side-to-side, combined with a longer front to back measurement. Arai's® Long Oval shell shape is currently available in the Profile.

"Round Oval", The transitional fit — in which the head is distinctly rounder, length and width being almost even. These shapes are typically very easy to see when you are looking at the consumer face-to-face, from eye to eye, as well as from the profile. Arai's® Round Oval shell shape is currently available in the Quantum series. (The Corsair V series has a "relaxed" Round Oval shell shape, which is not quite as pronounced as the Quantum's.)

"Intermediate Oval", The bridge fit — a round shape, but with considerably more forehead length in it. This shape "bridges" the gap between the two previous shapes. Arai's® Intermediate, Oval shell shape is currently available in the Vector series.

Arai's® Motocross and offroad helmets as well as our three-quarter open-face helmet lines do not share the multiple-fit packages. These are built on a single-fit package that runs in the middle of the shape range.

IN CLOSING:

Arai® is widely considered to be the world's best helmet. Let's make sure the customer gets the best service possible in the fitting of their helmet, to provide them with the satisfying, trusting Arai® experience.

ARAI® XD4 SOLIDS &amp; GRAPHICS

ARAI® XD4

- High-flow peak channels air directly into the front vents

  - Can be configured with shield and peak, peak only (for use with goggles) or shield only.*
  - Fully Removable/Replaceable and washable liner with optional sizes available for a custom fit
  - 4 top vents. Dual Intake/Dual Exhaust Ventilation—dual I/C top intake vents and Double Delta bridged exhaust vents designed to draw significant volumes of air from helmet interior
  - CLC (Complex Laminate Construction) shell—fiberglass composite is stronger and lighter—allows use of softer, less-dense liner materials inside for increased rider comfort
  - Efficient chinbar vent (with interior and exterior controls) flows fresh air to the mouth area or across the shield interior to help prevent fogging
  - Large chinbar side exhaust vents draw out additional hot air
  - Meets or exceeds Snell and D.O.T. standards
- *The peak/visor supplied is not suitable for high-speed use where air striking a side or main surface of the peak may cause difficulty in returning the head to a forward and/or level position

FOGCITY HYPER OPTIKS LIGHT REACTIVE ANTI-FOG VISOR INSERTS

- Light reactive, anti-fog, UV blocking vision
- A unique light reactive anti-fog visor insert, Hyper Optiks combines the advantage of the world renown FogCity anti-fog inserts with the newest photochromatic technology
- Built with a 20 mil, optical grade polycarbonate lens
- Changes color from a light mint green to a cobalt blue in less than 4 seconds under bright light
- Incorporating molecular-based anti-fog technology, the anti-misting properties of the Hyper Optiks insert will never wear out or saturate like chemical coatings, sprays and lesser quality anti-fog inserts based on acetate and butyrate substrates
- All Hyper Optiks products are now compatible with pin-based and non pin-based visor systems
- Pin-based means that your helmet visor is equipped with actual pins to hold an insert in place
- In the case of Hyper Optiks, these pins are used solely as installation guides, as the adhesive secures the insert to the shield
- Non pin-based means that your visor insert will be applied with the adhesive only

WARNING: Due to variability of the network signal, there may be some interference in the wire connections that are not caused by the N-Com system of the wire used. Functions of the Bluetooth® communication system depend on the model of the mobile phone used. Not all Bluetooth® phones enable simultaneously the intercom function with another Bluetooth® helmet and the connection of the mobile phone. The functionality of the intercom kit system with the mobile phone depends on the type of telephone used and the software version installed on it.
